

Job offer for staff specialist in Diagnostic Radiology in Denmark

A vacancy as a staff specialist in Diagnostic Radiology at a regional hospital in Denmark.

Working in a Danish hospital gives you both a good and a stable professional and private life. You get attractive working conditions and great possibilities for professional development, and a better work-life balance.

Northern Denmark has some of Denmark's most beautiful scenery. The tip of Denmark, Northern Jutland, is surrounded by water coming from three sides. It is said that the light in this part of Denmark is very special and this is also why many artists and painters came to this part of Denmark.

The Danish Healthcare system is divided into five regions. The Regions are in charge of running hospitals and managing the GP system. Hospital treatment is always free of charge for any resident in Denmark and emergency treatment is available for everybody who needs it.

The Northern Denmark Regional hospital is a combined hospital that covers five land registers. The hospital operates two emergency hospitals. One in Hjørring and one in Thisted. The acute function in these cities leads to a surgical day coverage. There is also a hospital providing medical care and elective surgery in the city of Frederikshavn and a neuro-unit also in Frederikshavn.

The Northern Regional Hospital provides the majority of treatments required by patients in the local area and is constantly developing in areas of investigation, treatment and patient care. Education is an important part of the hospital's core values, and the hospital houses a functioning simulation and skill centre, ensuring staff is professionally updated. The hospital has high academic ambitions and has its own research and works closely together with the university hospital.

The hospital has a good working climate, where working in a team is essential. The hierarchies are quite flat and every person is respected.

You can read more about the hospital here: <http://www.rn.dk/Service/English/Health-Care>

It would be appreciated that you have a broad clinical experience.

We need any applicant to be comfortable working both on his or hers own but also in teams.

The hospital hopes to get a new colleague who is loyal and committed and with a good mood. They expect you to be a good communicator and to have good interdisciplinary skills as you will be working in interdisciplinary teams together with colleagues who take pride in creating good treatment plan for the patient.

Working in Denmark you will be offered good working conditions, six weeks paid holiday and a 37-hour working week.
